Into the night

Just when I was about to write off Honolulu night life as too boring to bother with, House of Scooby held the second annual Miss Understood Super Queen of the Cosmos Pageant. Now I have a ton of material, and I don't even have to make up any lies. The pageant was essentially a drag queen contest, but more than that, it was a contest in outrageousness. (It was said that it was not actually a drag queen thing because women could have joined the pageant, but all the contestants were men and ... well, they certainly looked like drag queens. But, hey, what do I know? I'm just your basic idiot straight guy. I certainly think, however, that a woman entering the Miss Understood contest would be on the last frontier of feminism.) The event was hosted by last year's Miss Understood and Honolulu's undisputed queen of queens, Cocoa Chandelier. The evening, however, belonged to Xie Xie La Rage who took home the title Super Queen of the Cosmos and four of the seven sub-categories, including Intergalactic Super Slut. The evening's entertainment ranged from the queeniest camp lip-synching to artsy Iona Pear dancing to downright odd performance with Jen SS's enema-Jesus-jockstrap thing.

As the awards were being handed out, I thought about how much better the Miss America Pageant would be if it were more like the Super Queen of the Cosmos Pageant. We certainly wouldn't have these boring, innocuous "beauty queens" that we have now. I agree that the swimsuit competition should be dropped for Miss America, but only if it is replaced with the Intergalactic Cyberslut Competition; only then would you have an interesting contest. Also, none of the contestants in the Super Queen contest had fake boobs; sadly, the same cannot be said about the Miss America Pageant.

The pageant was so entertaining that while I watched it I realized it's too bad drag queens have to be relegated to a subculture. They are a part of our culture that should be right out there in the open like football. I think the average drag queen is a hell of a lot more interesting than a grunting moron football player. And there should definitely be more drag queens on television. Suppose we had "The News at 10 with Xie Xie La Rage." I can hear it now, "Those girls in Bosnia just will not settle down." Or how about a show like "Let's Go Fishing! with Cocoa Chandelier"? Who wouldn't watch that?

Let's move on to nongender-bender news, shall we? Anybody out there remember Lament for Zollo? A couple of months ago, they were setting people's eardrums on fire with their unique jazz-funk stylings. Then a couple of the members moved to San Francisco to assume the path of their destinies as modern-jazz legends, and they broke up. Well, now Lament for Zollo's CD is out, and I have been driving my neighbors crazy blasting it for the last couple of days. Kam's bass lines have been resounding though my neighborhood like a funky mantra, and the other day I heard my neighbor's dogs howling to the rhythm. Trust me, the Greyboy All-Stars have nothing on Lament for Zollo. You should do yourself and your neighbor's animals a favor and go out and buy it. The CD is available at Jelly's and Tower but not at Borders, so somebody should call them and tell them to get their corporate butts in gear.

Some of you might be aware that Mother's Day is just a few days away, and what's a better way to honor our mothers than by going to a huge party? Well, lucky for us, there happens to be a party at Caffe Valentino on May 12, Mother's Day. And we can tell our moms that we'll be boogeying for a good cause because the party is being put on by DJs Against AIDS. I think there are about 90 local DJs booked to spin, including Daniel J, FLX, Mario and G-Spot, so you should check it out. One hundred percent of the proceeds go to the AIDS Resource Center and the Life Foundation, so for once going out won't be a hedonistic waste of time and money; this time you'll actually be helping some people.
