

Photo
courtesy of G-Spot

G is for Green

He's known around town for his loyalty to DJing with vinyl, promoting weekly club events, and organizing the Love Festival for the past 10 years. But G-Spot, aka Greg Dehnert, also has a history of supporting the environment.

With a master's degree in civil engineering, he was vice president of the University of Miami's Earth Alert Club, president of the Florida Water Environment Association, and now, here in Hawai'i, he's organizing The Chinatown Getdown, an all-night event that supports his passion for the environment. "I want to bring awareness to those in the nightclub industry by allowing them to do what they love while donating their talents to charity," says Dehnert.

Eight clubs will join together on Friday, with one cover charge allowing for admission to all. Organizations like the World Wildlife Federation, Sierra Club, Greenpeace, Environmental Defense and the Wilderness Society will benefit. Presale tickets: $10 general, $15 VIP, at www.groovetickets.com. Details: www.chinatowngetdown.com.

— L.M.